

PRESS RELEASE 1 July 2011

DEEP LAUNCHES NEW PHOTOGRAPHIC EXHIBITION

The Deep is unveiling a new underwater photography exhibition in association with the Natural History Museum and BBC Wildlife Magazine. The show entitled, Wildlife Photography: A Vision of the Oceans features a selection of images specially selected to celebrate The Deep's tenth anniversary year and to highlight the importance of its marine conservation work. The exhibition is curated by the Natural History Museum from the archives of the Wildlife Photographer of the Year exhibition.

Colin Brown explains, "This unique exhibition is a truly great celebration of life in our oceans, featuring work by photographers around the globe. The selection includes some of the best images I have ever seen, including many species that The Deep is involved in conserving – including sharks, turtles and coral. All the pictures are very different – capturing very special moments such as orcas at sunset or a close up of the red spiky fairy crab. "

This unique exhibition can be seen only at The Deep. It is showing on The Deep's 3rd Floor and viewing is free of charge whilst normal entry prices apply to those visiting The Deep exhibitions. The photographic exhibition is showing at The Deep until 31st January 2012.

Further information

Public: Please call 01482 381000 (option 3) or visit www.thedeep.co.uk

Press: Please contact Linda Martin on 01482 381090/07751 288434 or email linda.martin@thedeep.co.uk.

Images of exhibition photographs available, along with contact details of two UK based photographers available for phone interview.

ENDS